Dear Professor Benga,

I am truly sorry to hear about you being omitted from the Nobel prize. It just happened that we discussed yesterday the case of Rosalind Franklin missing the credit, and later also the Nobel prize (because she died young) for discovering that DNA is a helix.

But also just missing the Nobel prize is an honour most people never get, and the fact that people like Dave Bradley make this known to everyone must be a comfort.

As you requested, I forwarded all our previous communications to your new email address, and I will be awaiting your suggestions to collaborate.

With kind regards,

Patrick
